Supporting individuals in their preferred place of care

Information sharing is critical for people, specifically when they reach the end of life to guide clinical decision making and respect their care preferences.

People tell us they don't want to tell the same story to different professionals time and again.

With GMCR EPaCCS, different professionals can view, add to and update the shared record with a person's end-of-life preferences.

This means that the health and care team have access to up-to-date and accurate information.
